Gospel (Luke 14.1, 7-14) Whoever exalts himself will be humbled, and whoever humbles himself will be exalted.

Reflection

HUMILITY is central for our readings today.

Today's readings challenge us to look at our relationships in dealing with others. The passage from Sirach advises us to be humble in our relationships with others. The Responsorial Psalm describes the relationship God has with those who are lowly and needy. The Letter to the Hebrews describes how the relationship between God and those who seek to have a relationship with God, has moved to a new and more intimate and attainable closeness, in and through Jesus. In the Gospel, Jesus describes the humility that should mark the way we relate to others. Jesus' presence at a dinner feast in today's Gospel prompts Him to relate two teachings dealing with humility and relationships with others. The first focuses on where one sits at a celebration banquet. The second lesson, in today's Gospel, commands that we should reach out to those who have need of our assistance and have no way of repaying us. We do not imitate the Goodness of our gracious GOD if we only reach out to those who can respond in quid pro quo manner. True humility is based on honesty – acknowledging who we are in God's sight and how the Lord Jesus has blessed us. As we reflect on Jesus' humility and His willingness to serve, We realize We have a lot to learn from the Master-Teacher Who came to serve, not to be served. The more we desire to be in relationship with God, the more we must be of service to those whom Jesus valued as loveable. We must not solely dwell on ourselves and our needs, but must think more of others and their needs. In that way, we manifest that we are disciples of the Master-Teacher Who humbly came to proclaim Good News and to die in service of others.
